

Franz MEINCKE 1835- 1914

Franz Ludwig Rudolph MEINCKE, or Louis as he was known for most of his life, was born and grew up in the area of Schleswig, in Prussia or Denmark, depending on the state of these two warring countries in the 1840s. Louis went to sea at an early age, from the port of Hamburg, and stopped off in Adelaide around 1850. It is thought that Louis stayed here as a consequence of thinking he would most likely be conscripted into the army if he returned home. He quickly found employment with the Pilot Service in Adelaide, and spoke at least German and English. He would never have seen his family again.

The earliest MEINCKE I have found is Louis' parents, Johann Friedrich MEINCKE, and his wife Elizabeth Catherine MOLLER. We have copies of Louis' birth record, written in German but kindly translated for us. Schleswig is in the border region of (then) Prussia and Denmark, and history shows that this area was affected by warring neighbours, changing control a number of times while Louis was growing up. However, Louis considered himself Danish. We know very little about Louis' parents, and they would have spent their lives in the Schleswig region. We don't know exactly what brought Louis to Adelaide, but he arrived at Port Adelaide around 1850, as a crew member of an incoming ship, and he stayed.

Louis is recorded as a mariner at his marriage with Phillipa BRAY in 1859. She came to Adelaide with her mother (her father had died) and five siblings in 1854. Louis was working on the lightship on the Port River, Port Adelaide at this time. The family were probably there as well, as their first child, Frederick William, was recorded as being born on the lightship. Louis soon began work as a translator for (mostly German) work gangs building the railway and bridges to Kapunda, where the family subsequently settled.

Louis built up a substantial carrying business moving materials by horse and dray to and from the railway yards. Louis and Phillipa had seven children, from which many descendants exist today. We are interested in the eldest, Frederick William MEINCKE, who worked in the carrying business with his father, but was also a noted bee breeder.

Frederick was born in 1859, a bit too soon after his parents wedding, as the first child of the couple. He married twice, to Mary Anne WILLIAMS in 1882, and they had four children. She died in 1889, and Fred then married Jane WILSON in 1896, producing a further six children. The third child of the first marriage was Ernest Gordon MEINCKE, born in 1886 at Kapunda. I have not found any of this family enlisting for WW1, but most of the family changed their name to LANGDON in 1915. The LANGDON name was adopted from Louis's wife Phillipa's grandmother's maiden name.

Ernest Gordon went to sea as a fourteen year old, and spent ten or so years as a mariner, including twice around Cape Horn. We have many postcards from Europe to describe his ships and travels. He married Effie BARRETT in 1911 and settled in Adelaide. It is recorded that Gordon was a motorman and drove trams for a time. One important event for Gordon is that he drove the first tram over the tramline viaduct at Lockleys, on the new line to Henley Beach. I remember the viaduct as several hundred metres of tressle track a couple of metres above the then swampy ground. All traces of the track have long since disappeared under housing.

Gordon and Effie LANGDON had two children, Jack and Joan. Jack was seven years older than Joan, and was a printer with an Adelaide daily paper. Jack married Sarah PENN, who had spent some of her youth growing up in India. Her father and grandfather had business interests in India, exporting jam to Delhi at this time. Joan's father was caretaker at Charles Birks & Co, later David Jones, and probably facilitated Joan being apprenticed as a seamstress with the Company. Joan was 14 years old, and unusually attended one year of High School. She stayed with Birks until she married Ray in 1944, when she was expected to stop working. Joan had met Ray KEIGHTLEY at a local dance, and they became an item. Unfortunately for Joan, Ray had enlisted in 1942. He arranged leave and returned to Adelaide to marry, but she had to wait till early 1946 before they could start their life together.

Joan and Ray built a house in Wattle Park and moved there in 1948. Joan was busy raising four children, Anne, Barbara, Paul and Pamela, but found time to be involved with Sunday School at Kensington Gardens Congregational Church, Meals on Wheels, the Red Cross, the Adelaide Plains Camelia Society, and several other clubs and groups with Ray.
