

Hannah FIELD 1800 – 1840

Hannah FIELD's webpage is at: <https://jansquire.com/tng/getperson.php?personID=I624&tree=squire>

Hannah FIELD was born in 1800 in Warwickshire, England, to Thomas and Hannah FIELD. I cannot find a record of her coming to Hobart, but she was here by 1824 when she married John BARRETT. We know John, a builder, arrived in Hobart in 1822. John and Hannah had six children, but Hannah died in Hobart, about five weeks after her sixth child was born, in 1840. The BARRETT family and surname later moved to Portland, then to Mount Gambier, and then to Adelaide around 1900.

Origin of the Surname FIELD

English and Irish: habitational name, probably from Field, in Leigh, Staffordshire. The placename derives from Old English feld 'flat open country'. In the late 12th century one of Henry II's warrior knights took the surname to Ireland, where it often took the semi-Norman French form de la Feld. From the 15th century onward it was increasingly reduced to Field and gave its name to Fieldstown, the family's chief seat near Dublin. A branch of the Anglo-Irish family that migrated back to England in the 14th century retained the Normanized form as Delafield .

English: topographic name for someone who lived by an arable field or an area of open country (Middle English feld).

Irish: Anglicized form of Feeley , through similarity of sound, and of Maghera by translation (chiefly in Armagh), from Gaelic An Mhachaire 'of the field'.

Thomas FIELD b c1775

I cannot find out anything about Thomas except for his name being on his daughter's baptism record. He had married Hannah, and they had at least one child, Hannah FIELD, born in 1800 in Warwickshire.

Hannah FIELD b1800

Hannah FIELD was born in 1800 in Warwickshire England, but the town was not stated. I cannot find any record of her emigrating to Hobart Tasmania, Australia, but she was here by 1824 when she married John BARRETT. Hannah and John had six children in Hobart, and the eldest was Abraham BARRETT, born in 1825. At some stage before 1847, Abraham had moved to Portland, where he married and had seven children. He later moved to Mt Gambier with his family. Hannah died in Hobart soon after her sixth child was born, in 1840, aged only 39 years.

I have previously described and written a narrative of the BARRETT surname, and you can read that story here:

Hannah is Anne's great great great grandmother.
